DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

When in the course of the events of the American Revolution, the representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, solemnly published the following Declaration of Independence, to wit:

That the United States of America, are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connections between them and that Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that as to the future, their political course should be directed to peace, commerce, and amity with all other States, as they shall see fit, without prejudice to their rights of peace and commerce with any State, territory, or prince whatever; and that for the support of this Declaration, they have mutually pledged their lives, fortunes, and sacred honor.
